How to Help Every Employee Improve Their Job Performance

Leaders are responsible for helping every employee improve their performance. Yet, many leaders aren't sure how to do so, so they either avoid the subject or resort to ambiguous feedback like, "Great job!" or "Try harder!" Through group discussions and skill practice, this program will show you how to hold employees accountable for their own job performance by providing specific real-time feedback and setting actionable improvement expectations. Want to help every employee improve their job performance? This program will show you how!
